

Girl Drowns In Kelsey Lake Near Orland

Last Saturday morning Kelsey's Lake, located about two miles northwest of Orland Park on the McCarthy Road, yielded the body of a Miss Johnson, 16 years of age, Chicago girl who was drowned in the lake while swimming on the 4th of July. Bathing and swimming in the lake is forbidden, but the girl disregarded the orders and went in swimming anyway, and when she struck the cold water she evidently was seized with cramps and went to the bottom of the lake. Grappling hooks were used to bring her to the surface. When found the body was lodged in some sea weed and appeared to be in a doubled-up position which it is said, would indicate she had been seized with cramps. The body of water is about 12 to 14 feet deep and is an artificial lake used for fishing purposes only.

Kittenball Diamond

After their second inning splurge, the New Lenox men added enough tallies in the later stages of the game to assure themselves of a comfortable winning margin.

The lone extra base hit of the game was a double by Schroeder, Frankfort star, who accounted for half of his team's total of four hits.

Bible Scene Enacted At Orland Lake

Two ministers of that church assisted in performing the ceremony, during which time the congregation sang, "At The Cross."

After the ceremony a woman offered prayer.

This congregation had gathered at noon and had their dinner under the trees near the lake.

ORLAND WITHOUT WATER WHEN PUMP FAILS

The village of Orland Park was without village water Monday and Tuesday as the result of the breakdown of the village water works.

Efforts were made Monday to restore service, but the trouble was not all overcome so the water was off again Tuesday.

Residents who depend entirely on the village water department for their water supply, were without any water unless they were fortunate enough to have neighbors or friends who could supply them with well water.

Fortunately no fire broke out during the time the water works were shut down. Had a fire occurred the fire department would have been helpless as there was no water in the village water tank.

A force of five men was on the job all day Tuesday and water service was restored Wednesday.

Orland Legion Post

Plan For Annual

Picnic August 4th

The regular meeting of the Orland Park Post of the American Legion held Tuesday evening was given over almost entirely to a discussion of plans for the annual picnic which will be held Sunday, August 4th. It was definitely decided to hold the picnic in Gee's Picnic Grove which place was found through experience of last year's picnic to be the most suitable spot for this event.

These annual picnics of the American Legion have come to be looked upon as one of the outstanding events of the summer season and it is planned to stage this year's affair on even a larger scale than those attempted in the past. A committee has been appointed to contact various bands, drum and bugle corps and uniformed drill teams thruout the district in an attempt to secure their participation in the event. The chairman of the various committees in charge of games and stands promises a full complement of these necessary adjuncts. As an especial attraction, it was decided to have a good dance orchestra and all attending the picnic are invited to dance to their hearts content without charge.

There will be games and sports for everyone and everyone who attends is assured an enjoyable time. Plans call for a parade at 1 p. m. in which the various local organizations, and the visiting bands, drum and bugle corps and drill teams will participate.

An attractive prize offer will be made to the organizations making the best showings.

Commander Little announces a special meeting for next Tuesday, July 16th at 8:30 p. m. and requests all Legionnaires to be present. Final details will be discussed and all arrangements for the picnic will be completed at that time. Tinley Business Men

Hold Get-Together

And Pep Meeting

With a view toward creating more interest in civic affairs and to make Tinley Park a better place to live in, the Tinley Park Business Men's Association sponsored a rousing get-together, meeting and semi-banquet at the Saenger Hall in Tinley Park on Monday evening.

The affair started off with a tasty feed. Mrs. Wm. Clemens of Tinley Park prepared a real German style potato salad and Mrs. R. Gonia also of Tinley Park supervised the preparation of delicious sausage and meat. Beer and coffee topped off the big feed.

The gathering was enlivened with song and music. Fred Erickson, Tinley's popular impresario presided at the piano and how he can make the ivories talk.

R. Gonia sang a number of bass solos which were roundly applauded. Among the numbers was one the words and music of which were composed by Mr. Erickson.

George Schreiber, who is well known for his German songs, was prevailed upon to sing a German number and responded with an airy little number "Der Peepmatz". He received a hearty encore.

The entire group then joined in singing popular songs.

R. Gonia, the Tinley Park druggist presided as toastmaster and following the jollification part of the program he addressed the business men on vital problems confronting them and pointed out that in order for their organization to accomplish their aims and purposes they must all be united. In unity there is always strength he pointed out.

The various business men present gave short talks setting forth their views on how to improve the community. The key note of the talks was to foster a better civic spirit.

Following the program the session was enlivened with an amateur boxing match in which Jackie Reed of Tinley Park starred.

The balance of the program was given over to playing cards and a social time.

A drive to increase the Association's membership was launched and 16 new members were enrolled on the Association's roster.

A very fine spirit of friendliness permeated the meeting and from all indications the Tinley Park Business Men's Association will mean much to the community in the not distant future.

GOLDEN DAWN

SYNOPSIS

Theodore Gatlin adopts a baby, "Penelope," in an effort to solve his matrimonial troubles. But his wife has never wanted her, and their affairs end in the divorce court. At a baseball game a ball strikes ten-year-old Penelope on the nose. Mrs. Gatlin spirits the child to Europe. Gatlin wills Penelope all his money, and is about to begin a search for her when a motor accident ends his life. Some ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt, rising young psychiatrist, is presented by Dan McNamara, chief of police, with a new patient—Nance Belden, a girl with a dual personality, for which her "saddle nose" is in part responsible. McNamara does not think she is a criminal and obtains Burt's testimony in court. Lanny, the doctor's office nurse, is also won over. Nance's criminal record outweighs Doctor Burt's explanation of her case and she is sent to San Quentin penitentiary. Nance escapes, and goes to Lanny's apartment. From one of the men in the boat on which the girl escaped McNamara learns that her real name is Penelope Gatlin. He also discovers that she is heiress to $750,000. Fearful of McNamara, in his official capacity, Nance flees. Lanny finds her in her apartment, asleep. Then she disappears, and McNamara learns that she is living in Paris. He also discovers he is in love with Lanny. Stephen warns Penelope by cable to leave Paris, as her whereabouts are known. She flees before the French police get on her trail, and pops back into Lanny's home in San Francisco.

"We'll not fix it in this city, my boy." Thus McNamara.

"Why not?"

"Because when that girl is well she'll probably elect to live her life here, and I don't want a soul in this city, with the exception of ourselves, to know that once she had a saddle nose and a dual personality."

"We can trust the ethical integrity of the man I purpose—"

"I'll trust nobody but myself—and then not too much. Where is the best plastic surgeon in this country?"

"In New York city."

"Lanny, I'll ask the police commission for a sixty day leave of absence. We'll be married at once and take this child to New York with us, put her in a hospital there and have the job done. While it's being done we'll have our honeymoon."

"Three is a crowd—on a honeymoon," Stephen warned.

"It's nothing of the sort," Lanny defended. "Stevie, you mind your own business. Dan and I know our way about."

"Indeed? Well, just because you're so contumacious, I'm going to tell you something. If I hadn't promoted this engagement, you and Dan would not now be engaged. Dan had you up on a pedestal—which is where you never belonged—and you're so naturally manly you never even learned the rudiments of the come-on as practiced by the dullest, so I talked the matter up!"

"You didn't talk it up to me."

"No, but I listened sympathetically when you raved about what a grand man Dan McNamara was, and my neck is still stiff from nodding agreement. I told Dan you were crazy about him and worked up his courage—"

"You're a liar," McNamara charged, feebly and without malice.

"Dan McNamara is one man who doesn't have to have help with his courage or thinking," Lanny declared proudly. "And you do, Stephen Burt. You're adept at lording it over your befuddled patients, but Rebecca P. Lanning is a horse of another color."

"I think I'll go home," Stephen retorted, and went.

He was back in the morning with the impedimenta of his profession. Penelope greeted him gravely. "Good morning, Doctor Burt."

He started. The strident note of Nance Belden was gone from her voice. She spoke now in the low, level tone of the girl of breeding. Then she sat down, and they conversed for half an hour on topics of general interest, but during that time she did not move once from her seat. Her vocabulary was free of underworld expressions, her diction perfect, her sentences grammatical.

"You have had a good night's rest, Miss Gatlin," he ventured.

She nodded, smiling a little. "I am not at all nervous this morning, Doctor Burt. When I am very tired, or excited about something, I am always horribly nervous."

"And you get dreadfully depressed, do you not?"

She nodded. "So depressed that at times I want to die."

"Well, we might as well start your physical examination. I'm going to try to ascertain why you can't be cheerful always. There's a reason, of course, for your nervousness and depression, so I want to examine you very meticulously and see if your trouble can be charged up to some physical condition. Let me feel your pulse."

It was eighty-three, full and strong. Stephen's examination of the girl was as complete as modern medical science could make it, and when the last laboratory report came in three days later he called Lanny in to discuss the girl.

"With the exception of a subnormal chest expansion, Lanny, that girl is without doubt the healthiest young woman I have ever examined. Her sole physical defect is her nose. But for that I think she'd be a husky little athlete right now. She told me she always wanted to excel in tennis, golf and dancing—well, of course, she'd want to excel in something. She couldn't compete in good looks. I'll write up my report on her and you can hand a copy of it to the man who is to do the operation. I've wired him that I was sending on a patient, and he has agreed to care for her. I see by this morning's paper that Mac has been given a leave of absence."

Lanny nodded.

"When are you and Dan to be married?"

"Tomorrow. We're flying to Reno to avoid the three-day notice of intention to marry demanded by the California law."

"Penelope flying with you?"

"Naturally. She's my bridesmaid!"

"Who's going to give the bride away?"

"Nobody. Dan and I are too old to stand for a long-drawn-out marriage ceremony."

"Well, I suppose I'm stuck for a wedding present. How much money have I got in the bank?"

"Approximately twenty thousand. I'm going to buy you some Argentine bonds today. There's no reason why those bonds shouldn't be selling at—"

"Lanny, you're mercenary. I don't care for a dissertation on bonds. Draw yourself a check for ten thousand and spend it all in riotous living. Give old Dan a real blow out—"

"Stevie, you're mad!"

"Quiet, please. Love from the boss, Lanny, and no back talk from you. And for heaven's sake do get a half-way intelligent nurse to take your place while you're away."

"I've engaged Miss Ordway."

"Horrible. Her face would stop a parade. She's efficient, but terrible to look at."

The tears were welling in Lanny's eyes. "Oh, Stevie, I want you to be safe—while I'm away," she choked.

She Nodded, "So Depressed That at Times I Want to Die."

"No holly-toity—young thing—with her sweet smile—and winning ways—and you such a softy—oh, Stevie, I can't bear to leave you. If I do, something dreadful will happen to you." And Lanny laid her head on her desk and sobbed quite heartily.

However, Stephen knew what was good for Lanny. "You make me ill," he said coldly. "You carry on like a girl of sixteen."

Instantly Lanny was furious. "You don't appreciate me," she charged.

"Be still. Where's the check book? On an occasion such as the present I suppose I should sign the check myself."

"It wouldn't do any good if you did, darling. You've never registered your signature at your bank and you have no authority to sign checks on your own bank account. How funny!" and Lanny commenced to laugh. "How lucky I thought of that before leaving!"

Thereupon Stephen put both arms around her and kissed her three times and told her she was as the shadow of a rock in a weary land; that she was very dear to him; that whatever she did was O. K. with him and he'd miss having his daily fight with her; and finally so softened her that she consented to let him fly to Reno and give the bride away. It developed that she had always wanted him to do this but loathed putting him to so much trouble.

At the expiration of his leave McNamara returned to duty, but Lanny remained with Penelope in New York. Performed by a master, the operation had proved successful thus far. The actual work of the operation had been the least of it; the subsequent care of the bone and skin graft, and the surgeon's artistry in reshaping the nose were what required time and patience. Lanny reported that the patient would not be discharged for at least three months more.

"How did Penelope approach the operation?" Stephen queried of McNamara.

"Happily. Not a whit nervous. Lanny had complete control over her." He grinned. "I passed as her Uncle Dan and the wife as Aunt Lanny. Lanny saw to it that the girl didn't do any talking while the doctor was present."

"You're a good fellow, Dan."

"Well," McNamara admitted humorously, "it wasn't much of a honeymoon, I'll admit. However, we'd set our hands to the job and we couldn't turn back, God help us."

"Well, you have this consolation, my friend. Your job is over, and mine will commence when Lanny returns with the girl."

"D'ye think you can pull her through, lad?"

"I'm sure I can, Dan. A psycho-neurosis generally is impossible to cure unless you know its causative factors and can remove them. If you can do that, it's as simple as removing a wart. Dan, have you looked up the girl's ancestry?"

"I have not."

"Then do so immediately. We might run into a situation that will shed a bright, effulgent beam of light on my job."

"The attorney that handled Gatlin's affairs ought to be a good man to start with, Stephen. I'll motor to San Jose tomorrow and look him up. The bank will know who he is."

The bank president did know the name of the attorney, but added the disconcerting information that the man had been dead six years. McNamara thereupon called the man's widow to ask if she still retained her late husband's files. He had a faint hope that if she would permit him to look into the Gatlin file he might find a clue. He was informed to his amazement, that about two years and a half before, Mrs. Merton had called upon her, asked for the file and had been given it.

There was but one club in the city—the Elks—and McNamara wondered if Theodore Gatlin had belonged to that. He discovered Gatlin had, and from the dining room steward, who remembered Theodore Gatlin very well, he ascertained the names and addresses of three men with whom Gatlin had according to the steward, seemed very friendly.

Of these three men, one was dead and the others were unable to shed any light upon the parentage of Gatlin's adopted daughter, although one man had a hazy recollection that the child's father had been an army officer and had been killed in the Philippines. The chief's questionings, however, elicited the names of two women who had been friendly with Mrs. Gatlin, so McNamara called upon both. They could furnish him no information beyond the fact that Mrs. Gatlin despised the child Penelope; that she had never been enthusiastic about the adoption; that she had never been kind to the girl; that Gatlin and Penelope had been inseparable pals. They had a feeling that Mrs. Gatlin, while apparently delighting in persecuting her husband, was, nevertheless, insanely jealous of his love for his adopted daughter; that up to the day of her accident, Penelope had been a bright, healthy, normal child, fun-loving and affectionate and humorous, and the delight of her foster father.

CHAPTER XI

Dan reported to Stephen, somewhat depressed, because he had returned, he thought, without a scintilla of worthwhile information. Stephen, however, thought otherwise. "I'll have to question Mrs. Merton again," he decided. He rang for Miss Ordway. "Telephone to Mrs. Merton," he ordered, "and tell her I wish she'd drop in here some day soon. Tell her I'd like the latest report on her health."

"What are you going to do?" McNamara asked.

"Hypnotize her again, of course. I've got to release her from the mental inhibition I set upon her in the case of her adopted daughter. Otherwise she'll not talk."

A minute later Miss Ordway entered the room. "Mrs. Merton says she will be down for her interview in half an hour, Doctor."

"When she arrives, Dan, you step out into the nurse's office until I have her under control; then I'll admit you. I want you to take copious notes."

Mrs. Merton fluttered into Stephen's consultation room forty minutes later. "Oh, Doctor Burt," she whined, "I'm so glad you've sent for me. My insomnia is worse than ever," she wailed. "Oh, Doctor, do you think I'm going crazy?"

"Not at all, not at all," he soothed her.

"You are excited over nothing. But you are in a highly nervous condition, of course, and until you have settled down it would be useless for me to attempt to examine you. If you could have a little nap for, say half an hour on the couch in the next room, I'm sure you would awaken much refreshed."

"Oh, if I could only sleep half an hour, Doctor, if I only could. What a relief it would be."

"Nonsense, my dear lady. We doctors have ways of inducing sleep even in the most obstinate cases of insomnia."

At his command she lay down on the couch and Stephen placed a cushion under her head. Employing the appropriate method of inducing hypnotic sleep, Stephen had her drowsy within three minutes; in ten minutes she had passed into a profound state and Stephen summoned McNamara, gave him a pad and pencil and silently indicated a chair.

Mrs. Merton, however, was aware of his presence. "Who's there?" she demanded in a drowsy tone.

"Doctor McNamara, Mrs. Merton. I have called him in to confer with me on your case."

Strong Favorite of Quilt Makers

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK

The "Irish Chain" quilt can be found in almost every collection, and quilt makers will make at least one of these simple chain patterns. The single, double, or triple Irish Chain has one, two, or three blocks in the chain. The background is white and the squares are a solid blue, red, or other dark mixed colors to give contrast. The squares in this quilt measure 1½ inches without seam, and they are appliqued on two different nine-inch blocks; one all checked, the other with a square in each corner. These are assembled alternately to give above effect. Seven 9-inch blocks are used across top and nine blocks on side. With a 6-inch border quilt will measure finished about 72 by 90 inches. This quilt is simple to make but cutting of patches and blocks must be accurate to produce good results.

This quilt is one of the 33 popular quilts shown in book No. 23, which will be mailed to you upon receipt of 15 cents. Cutting charts, instructions and valuable information for quilt makers will be found in this book.

SEE SPIRITS OF CRATER VICTIMS

Ghostly Visitors Bring Fear to Japanese.

Curling up in the smoke which rises from the crater of Mihara, Japan's famous suicide volcano, the ghostly images of three girls were seen by terror-stricken villagers on the island of Oshima. Remembering that Mihara rose to fame as a lovers' death tryst following suicides of three high school girls, the villagers said the specter of the girls was an ill omen.

Frightened, the superstitious said the volcano's "nushi" (master) was about to "rise from the land of fire" to lure visitors to "jigoku" (the abode of the devil).

Three days later visitors from Tokyo, just across the bay, swarmed to the island, partly out of curiosity and partly because it was Sunday and the island's natural beauty and warmth attracted them.

At 10:30 a. m. about 100 spectators were gathered on the spot from which persons committing suicide plunge to their death. Suddenly a young man, scarcely twenty-five, ran forward and flung himself headlong into the crater. As the spectators, horrified and speechless, looked at each other, another man, a few years older, came out from the throng and, without saying a word, walked as though in a trance and dropped into the fiery pit.

Nervously the spectators moved away, afraid that some unseen hand might pull them into the smoldering inferno. Suddenly another youth, about twenty-three, ran to the edge of the crater, stripped himself of his kimono and, with nothing on except shorts, stepped over the brink into the world beyond.

Hardly had the talk of these suicides died down when, two days later, three more men flung themselves into the fire-emitting abyss, one after another, as many spectators looked on.

The police have decided that hereafter all visitors to the island will be questioned before being permitted to land. Those suspected of suicide intentions will be barred from landing. All visitors must buy round-trip fares.

Officials of the home office in Tokyo are frankly pessimistic.

Last year more than 800 persons lost their lives in Mihara's crater despite every effort to put a stop to the suicide craze. The crater is seven miles around and it is not humanly possible to net-in this vast territory as have been other suicide-trysting places.

Did That, Anyway

A motorist crashed through the front door of a house and landed in the parlor, where a woman sat reading. It must be said to his credit that he had the courtesy to remove his hat.

Chevrolet Company To Sponsor Weekly Radio Broadcasts

Chevrolet Motor Company, using as a story background actual cases from the official files of the Federal Bureau of Investigation of the United States, Department of Justice will sponsor a series of weekly radio broadcasts to be known as "G-Men", beginning the middle of July.

Plans for the program over the Red network of N.B.C. were announced by company officials following their return from Washington, where they conferred with Attorney General Homer Cummings, J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and other interested department heads.

A complete episode, based on government records of the bureau's special agents, will be dramatized in a half-hour program each week. All the scripts in the series will be based on the factual records of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and will be submitted to Director Hoover for checking before a program goes on the air.

Phillip H. Lord, nationally known for his depiction of the radio character "Seth Parker," who will write the scripts, is now in Washington making a first-hand study of the operations of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, which has made available to him its records of completed cases.

While pleased with the public interest in the spectacular cases it has handled, the Department of Justice, Washington understands, feels that emphasis on its work has been somewhat distorted, and that the drama of the sustained, persistent and relentless pursuit of criminals, originating in its great scientific laboratories, has been subordinated.

Chevrolet Motor Company believes it is discharging a public duty by holding up a clear mirror to the G-Man and letting the true reflection, as contained in the official records, speak for itself. The radio programs therefore will accent details only as they may be accented in the archives.

"The G-Man is entitled to the widespread honor in which he is held today," an official of the company said. "He has done and is doing magnificent work in righting a situation that several years back seemed rapidly delivering the United States into the hands of the criminal element.

"In line with its other activities of a public welfare nature, Chevrolet offers this radio series, in the hope of extending accurate knowledge about the workings of the Department of Justice, and in the belief it may double, by spreading that knowledge, the effectiveness of this arm of government service by increasing public co-operation in the war on crime.

"If this can be done, the G-Man will be an instrument of law enforcement which should cause potential violators to hesitate a long time before taking the chance of having the Federal Bureau of Investigation going to work on them.

"Public enemy after public enemy has been overthrown. Gang after gang has been jailed or exterminated. Some years ago we doubted if it could be done. The law-breaker was in the saddle. But it has been done. We will present the true histories of how it was done in the hope that misguided persons will see the hopelessness of crime, and be more convinced than ever that the G-Men get their man.

"If there are some who are still dazzled by the false glamor of the gangster, we hope these radio programs will show how little glamor is left to the criminal when he comes to the end of the road."

FRANKFORT

Blome, son Everett, Mrs. Esther Covantry, son Berkeley and mother, Mrs. Nelson, Miss Elizabeth Covantry and Mrs. Lilly Reilly all of Beverly Hills and Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Hansen, Miss Bertha Huft and Ernest Tewes of Plainfield, and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Warning, and Mr. and Mrs. Ray Warning and family.

All those who wish to attend are kindly asked to bring individual table service and will be expected to furnish own transportation. A pot luck dinner will be served.

NOTES OF THE ACES

SOME DAY the entire team is going to be out to practice and manager Sorenson is going to have a fit. ANYONE FINDING George Bennett's arm that was lost in Sunday's game, please return as he will probably need it again.

THEY SAY two heads are better than one, but I have my doubts if you are indifferent, ask Harold Cappel or Ed. Walsh. They had a first class collision at practice the other night and they both had a cracked head. They were both trying to catch the same ball and ran directly into each other.

FIRST THING you know the team is going to get a first aid kit and then maybe Brown and Martie won't be getting bunged up all the time.

THEY TELL me Bruder was out to the ball game last week. Either his girl turned him down or his mother kicked him out of bed and his dad made him stay out. He used to be the cheer team's leader, but now the team cheers when he comes out to a game. Oh me! what a changing world!

THEY SAY practice Tuesday night. Don't forget and would you believe it six or seven did come out. They must have known that the girl, kitten ball team was going to practice. These boys can sure give the girls some pointers about the game, but they can't be told themselves. No Sa!

GEORGE (DODO) Lauffer, that new pitcher of ours, is sure giving the boys plenty of batting practice with plenty of hooks and curves.

ORLAND PARK

The monthly Orland Park Child Welfare clinic was held in the school house Wednesday afternoon. There was a fair attendance.

Orland Park is attracting quite a number of fishermen. Week end picnics are also being held on the shores of the lake.

Mayor C. M. Kolman who has been visiting in Iowa for the past month is expected home this week. Floyd and Merle Cooper visited in Indiana Tuesday.

A number of young folk of Orland Park are using the highways for roller skating. The skating route is down 143rd street to Wolf road, and Wolf road to 159th street, 159 street to Keane avenue and Keane avenue to 143rd street.

John Andres who has been in Detroit, returned home the forepart of the week.

The St. Michael church 4th of July picnic was successful in spite of the heavy rain which fell late in the afternoon. In the evening an open air dance was held.

Finishing touches are being put to the new living rooms in connection with the Purple Candle.

The many friends of George Gee, Jr., are glad to see him back at the Orland State Bank following his siege of illness.

Texas Will Hold

World's Fair

With the demolition of scores of old structures already under way in Fair Park, plans moved forward rapidly the past week toward actual start of construction of the Texas Centennial Exposition, to open in Dallas, next June 6 in commemoration of the 100 anniversary of Texas independence.

Backed by the Federal government, the state, the city and thousands of citizens thruout the country who have subscribed to a Centennial bond issue, the $20,000,000 World's Fair will portray the glamorous romance of Texas history and the growth of the rich Southwestern empire.

The Exposition which is expected to attract 15,000,000 visitors to Dallas, will be the climax of a statewide celebration of Centennial year, following historic pageants and events in San Antonio, Houston, Goliad, Nacogdoches, San Jacinto and other historic shrines of the nation's largest state.

Scores of workmen already are busy in Fair Park, where the State Fair of Texas has annually attracted upwards of one million visitors in its sixteen days of operation. Old structures, which have housed State Fair exhibits are being razed to make way for the great exhibit buildings to be built for the 1936 World's Fair. Architectural plans are nearing completion and construction work on the new buildings is expected to start soon.

The State of Texas will spend $1,200,000 on a great Hall of State. A Petroleum and Gas Building will feature the largest exhibition of oil well machinery and equipment ever presented in the United States; the electrical and Communications Building will graphically depict the modern marvels of science.

The city of Dallas will erect a $500,000 palace to contain the art works of the old masters. The Negro Building will portray the progress in the arts, industries and sciences of the race. It will be the first Negro Building ever featured in an international exposition. Agriculture, live stock, cotton, Pan-American, Mexico, the Medical Arts, Better Homes, Pure Foods and Transportation will have buildings of their own. Already constructed are the $560,000 auditorium building with its great pipe organ and the $375,000 sports stadium, which will seat 46,000 people.

MOKENA LOSES TO SYMERTON IN LEAGUE

By Williams

Mokena lost a tough game to Symerton on the Fourth of July. The score was 8 to 1. The Aces started out okay but couldn't keep up the grade. There were too many errors for a team to win a game with so they had to take it on the chin. Stark was the lead off pitcher for the Aces but he couldn't hold them down. They scored heavily in the third and held their lead thru out the game. Wes went in for Stark at the end of the third and held them down for the rest of the game. The breaks seemed to be all against the boys and they couldn't get the ball out of the infield, when they did there was some one there waiting for it.

Bennett scored Mokena's only run in the eighth. King allowed them only 3 hits with Symerton getting 11. Well so much for that game. They have been beaten by the Aces so the boys don't feel so bad.

TINLEY PARK TAKES MOKENA ACES UP

Well folks it looks as tho the mid-season slump has hit the boys who enuff—they just can't seem to click at all.

George Laufer pitched the Aces game Sunday and only allowed 4 hits and dealt the boys 9 strike outs and 3 walks which is pretty good considering this was the lad's first game this year. He showed every one he could pitch and I don't mean perhaps. By the way, before I forget it, if anyone finds George Bennett's arm around the infield anywhere please return to the owner. He said he would be glad to get it back after that throw he made in the eighth inning. Bill also had quite a time when he had a race to first against Freddy Fletcher to beat him by the smallest of margins. Harold copped the fielding honors when he had to reduce himself a few pounds running after and making some very fine catches. It seems as tho the o.d. saying about two heads being better than one is all right but when you get three together it is bad. Marti, Brownie and George all ran after a high fly and then all stopped waiting for the other to catch it.

The Aces tried hard to score thru out, but the best they could do was 2 runs. Tinley scored 1 in the 3rd 1 in the 4th, 1 in the 5th and 2 in the 8th. Well so long till next time.

Old Age Pension Not Payable Before Jan. 1, 1936

Among the scores of measures which Gov. Henry Horner has approved since the adjournment of the 59th General Assembly, is the Old Age Pension bill, making possible pensions for Illinois' needy aged persons. Pointing out that the measure was drawn without reference to the federal social security act, Governor Horner told the large group which witnessed the signing that it must be amended "so Illinois can participate fully in the benefits provided in federal legislation."

"I am signing this bill now," the Governor said, "because I want you people assembled here and the country to know I am a hearty subscriber to the theory of old age pension."

The measure approved by Governor Horner provides for the formation and disbursement of a pension fund to aged persons. The relief is not to exceed $1 a day, and only to persons of 65 years of age or more who have been residents of Illinois for at least 10 years within the 15 immediately preceding application for pension. Grants will not be payable before January 1, 1936.

Mad Dogs Cause Much Damage

Illinois has had the greatest crop of mad dogs in several years during the current season, according to a report by the State Department of Public Health, which shows that for the first six months of 1935 no less than 459 dog heads were examined in the department laboratories and one-half of that number showed positive evidence of rabies. Many hundreds of persons have been exposed to hydrophobia thru bites by mad dogs.

At an expense of about $15,000, the State Department of Public Health furnished the Pasteur anti-rabic treatment for 1,200 people who had been bitten during the first six months of the year. In addition to this cost, there was an additional expense of medical fees for giving the treatment, a requirement of 14 to 21 doses for each person.

Mad dogs the Department report said, also caused heavy loss to stock owners. Horses, cattle and sheep were attacked, a large number of which was lost because of rabies spread by mad dogs. To stop the disease, the Department recommends confinement of valuable dogs for 30 days and the destruction of all stray and ownerless dogs.

TINLEY PARK

Misses Bernice Vogt and her fiancé, John Janke, spent the Fourth of July at Starved Rock Park. Both had a very good time.

Jackie Reed, who is an amateur boxer, suffered a broken ear drum while boxing Clyde Davis, Friday, July 5th at the Northwest Stadium. He sustained a hit on the jaw in the fourth round of a five round fight.

Miss Louise Snodgrass of Chicago who is teaching music here, is taking a two weeks vacation which she is spending in Tinley Park. She formerly resided here.

The Tinley Park Legion Post will hold their annual election of officers at their meeting next Tuesday night.

Henry Brueggemann is serving on the grand jury.
Mr. and Mrs. Henry Schreiber of Chicago have been visiting with the former's father, George Schreiber, this week.

Mrs. Pearl Boldt has been engaged as bookkeeper at the office of the Tinley Park Dairy.

The T. Y. O. who sponsored the Fourth of July celebration, report the affair a financial success. A sudden heavy rain at the last minute had threatened to spoil the parade, but the storm was quickly over and the weather cleared up nicely so that a good sized crowd attended the parade and the dance which followed.

On July 7th Miss Bernice Vogt celebrated her birthday with a host of friends. Dinner was served at 6 p. m. Games were played thruout the evening and all had a wonderful time.

Fred Schmeriknecht has been engaged in painting the interior of the Hollstein building on Oak Park avenue.

T. Y. O. TATTLER
Well folks, first of all I want to thank everybody who helped make our 4th of July picnic and dance a success. The T. Y. O. is grateful to everyone who attended their celebration.

Boy o' boy what's this about Ollie and Tony. It sure looked kind of bad there for awhile and over whom I wonder? But things are settling down now and have been smoothed out.

What happened last Sunday night to Ollie and Siemie. It seems they were sort of stranded in Harvey with no way home. But their girl friends came to the rescue and returned the lovebirds home safe and sound.

Don't forget you club members the big party the T. Y. O. is going to hold next week.

T. Y. O. GIRLS
The meeting of the T. Y. O. Girls was held Friday, July 5th at the home of Pearl Boldt. The Fourth of July picnic and dance was discussed and we found out it was a big success.

Say did you hear how easy certain gals such as Fern and Lois pick up fellows like they did in Harvey?

Certain young folks surely have fun going to their homes and gathering food for their Sunday supper.

Say (Bobby) Hick is sure going places now and it happens to be Emory.

Dear Lorretta when she is up in a ferris wheel and gets to the top prays that Emory was up there with her.

Don't forget the next meeting Friday, July 12 at the home of Pearl Boldt.

Well good-bye until the next issue.

Slaves Were Shaved
A clean-shaven face in the East was originally a sign of servitude. Old pictures show kings and conquerors heavily bearded and with long hair, while their slaves and captives are clean-shaven and close-cropped. The Greeks and the Romans later discarded "face fungus," as it gave their enemies a hand-hold in the close fighting, which was, of course, the rule in those days.

Bricks Used by Aviators
In the early days of the World war French aviators carried as part of their equipment a bag of bricks. They were carried in the hope that a pilot might be able to hurl a brick into the propeller of the enemy's airplane. Two German machines were thus brought down.

Clean Electric Bulbs

The dry dust and dirt that accumulates on electric lamp bulbs and inside electric lighting fixtures often causes a decrease of illuminating value of 30 per cent within three months and where soot and oily dust are found the results are even worse. Therefore, all electric lamp bulbs and fixtures should be cleaned thoroughly and regularly.

Glorious Contemplation

An Egghsh parliamentary candidate wound up a frenzied oration as follows: "Gentlemen, the glorious victory which will swamp our opponents when the eve of the election dawns upon us will re-echo in words of gold through the corridors of time, until the last grand trump shall sound through the valleys on the mountaintops."

Enoch Arden of Skulpin Cove

By TRUMAN ORDIERNE
© McClure Newspaper Syndicate,
WNU Service.

FIRST week in April I was busy in the fishhouse knittin' heads. The big doors were open lettin' in the spring sunshine, the smell of the flats and the shrill chirp of the early ring-necks that were diggin' for sand worms in the mud. As I worked away with the twine it comes into my head all at once. I wonder who'll get the widder Bascom? Sid Bascom had been lost off on the Kittle a year before in a nor-west squall. His boat was picked up miles off shore but the body was never found.

Judith Bascom mourned for a good husband, like the good woman she was. But she was a fisherman's daughter and had known many sea tragedies in the 40 years she had lived at Skulpin Cove. Judith Bascom was a handsome woman, sun-tanned face, good form in spite of the years, brown eyes that twinkled, and, like most all the daughters of fishermen, had a quick wit and a ready answer.

Sid Bascom had left his wife fairly well off—a small farm borderin' on the beach, a fair payin' business, and some money. There had been no children and I often wondered if Judith didn't get lonesome. She was at the landin' one day buyin' fish as the boats came ashore, and I says, jokin': "Jude, you look tired."

"Yes," she comes back, "I am tired. Trume, and lonesome. Can't you find me a man?"

"Plenty of 'em fussin' 'round, Jude," I says. "Can't you sort one out? There's Deacon Goodwin and Skipper Sol Becker, both 'bout your age and well fixed."

"A saint and a sinner," says Judy. "One thinks he is and the other knows he is," and she went on buyin' cod.

As I sat there workin' on the twine that day I heard somebody clumpin' up the path 'round the point with rubber boots on, hummin' a hymn tune: "On the other side of Jordan in the sweet fields of Eden," but when he sees the fishhouse door open he slacks up his singin' and hauls to. "Good afternoon, Truman. Hope you are feelin' well today."

"Tolerable, Deacon Goodwin. Hope you're the same. Come in and rest yourself. I see you been lumbin'." He had a two-time fork on his shoulder and a big lump fish on each time. In the spring the tide leaves the lumps in the little ponds among the ledges, and the natives get them with forks. The Deacon sets down on a trawl tub, fidgets some, and asks: "Truman, what do you think of the widder Bascom?"

"No smarter woman 'round the Cove," I says, "and it don't hurt much to look at her. Are you thinkin' some in that quarter, Deacon?"

"I have given some thought and prayer to the matter and I need a companion and helper up to my house, but Judith is not a church-goin' woman," he says.

"Don't let that worry ye any, Deacon. You never heard a word agin' Judith Bascom," I says, "and your church door is wide."

The Deacon shouldered his lump fish and went off up across to his house. I am about ready to quit and call it a day when I hears another songster comin' down the Cove road:

"Hi de di, Skipper the dee!
How I love to sing to thee.
I sing with joy and I sing with glee,
For I'm just as young as I used to be."

Skipper Sol Becker shoots up in front of the door and comes in. Good nature sticks out all over Skipper Sol, and a mighty good-lookin', big, wholesome man he is. He had been to town and was feelin' some chipper. "Hello there, Trume," hails Skipper Sol. "Got anything in the cupboard?"

"Always a drop for you, Cap'n Sol," I says. "Set down while I get it."

"Trume," says the skipper, "I got 'bout tired bein' an old back and I'm thinkin' 'bout askin' Judy Bascom to spice up with me. We've always been good friends. Do you think she'll have me?"

"You old fool," I says, "do you think you can get a wife 'thout doin' some courtin'? Go see Judy and take her 'round some. You've got a good hoss and buggy. Another thing, Deacon Goodwin is settin' his cap in that quarter."

"Deacon Goodwin courtin' Judy Bascom?" I barks the skipper. "If I catches that old Bible-back skinfint cruisin' 'round her I'll carry away his jib."

Soon after that the Cove gossip was busy. Deacon Goodwin was callin' on Judy Bascom Wednesday nights, and she was goin' ridin' with Cap'n Sol Becker Sunday afternoons. Of course the Deacon finds it out and he reproves Judy for consortin' with such a ungodly person as Sol Becker.

"Mrs. Bascom," says the Deacon, "you well know my reason for callin' on you of late. I sadly need a wife to care for my house, and if you should see fit to unite your lot with mine I shouldn't want it said that you had been too friendly with such a person as Solomon Becker, a man given to profanity and to strong drink at times."

The Deacon reaches for Judy's warm hand and holds it. (She said it was gold as a fish.) "Judith, I shall call for my answer next Wednesday evening, and in the meantime I shall pray that you see the light." He lets go of her hand and goes home. Judith goes to bed and thinks it over. Deacon Goodwin is a good manager, stands way up in the church, and then she laughs right out to herself. "Oh, Lord, what a lover!"

Sunday afternoon is sunny and warm. Cap'n Sol drives up to her door, his rig all shined up, and Judy comes out and gets in. They take a long ride and coming home in the dusk Skipper Sol does some huggin' and Judy snuggles up some. Skipper Sol winds the reins around the whip and lets Bay Jess walk. Some different, she thinks, from the way Deacon Goodwin sparks a woman. Skipper Sol tightens the hitch he's got 'round Judy Bascom's waist. "Judy," he says, "I'm tired of living an old back up there in my house. Mother is a good housekeeper but she is gettin' old. I've got enough to take care of you without touchin' your property and I'll help run your place. Let's you and I get spliced. I know you are lonesome well as I be. What do you say?" and he reached over and kissed her.

Judy Bascom liked Sol Becker and the Deacon was out of it from that minute. She couldn't bear to think of him. Then a scheme of half spite and half mischief comes into her head. "Sol," she says, "come to my house Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock and I'll give you an answer."

Now for Sid Bascom—that nor-west squall that blew off the land the day he was lost lasted three days and then, as fishermen say, turned the corner and blew some more. Sid kept his boat 'fore it and bailed long as he could. Weak from hunger and thirst he gave it up. The next he knew he was in a dirty bunk with a Portuguese sailor standin' over him with some kind of a hot drink. His head ached bad. He looks around that fo'castle with its row of bunks and asked the Portuguese what ship he was on and where they were. "Dis whale barque de Ellen Briggs. She picks you up off da water. Leetle boat, big ocean. You mos' dead," the Portuguese tells him.

Sid tries to get out of the bunk but is too weak and tells the sailor to tell the Cap'n he wants to see him. Cap'n Studly, a short, stout, red-faced man, comes to the fo'castle and asks Sid what he wants. "I want to be set ashore at the nearest port," says Sid. "My wife must think I am lost. How long have I been aboard your ship?"

"Most two weeks," says the Cap'n, "and all that time you've been out of your head. You can thank Manuel here that you are alive. I can't set you ashore. We are bound on a two years' whalin' cruise to the Southern Grounds. You'll have to stay aboard."

Whaling hands were hard to get at that time, and whaling captains kept out of ports of call, account of men deserting, only when obliged to put in for fresh water and supplies. Sid Bascom gradually gained strength and one day meeting Cap'n Studly on deck, he demanded to be landed at the nearest harbor, his right as a citizen of the United States. The captain swore at him, turned him over to the first mate and gave orders to put the man in one of the watches.

The Briggs kept away from harbors where there were cable offices. It was months before he got a letter ashore to a small island where passing ships called a few times a year. At the first possible chance he jumped ship at a South American port. All he had in the world was the greasy clothes he had on. No need telling how, in time, he worked his passage to Boston and there was given money enough to get home to Skulpin Cove.

That Wednesday night that Judith Bascom set came Deacon Goodwin 10 minutes early. Sharp at 8 came Cap'n Sol Becker. When he entered the little parlor and saw the Deacon settin' there, his grin changed to an ugly scowl. "What in hell you doin' here, you old dog robber?"

"I don't mind your ungodly slurs, Cap'n Becker. I have a right to call on my neighbors. Mrs. Bascom asked me to come. We have private matters to discuss."

"I'll give you one minute to get out of this house," says Skipper Sol, and he takes out his watch. "If you ain't gone I'll heave you out body, guts and stomach."

Just that minute Judy Bascom, who had been out of the room, turns from the hallway to go in the parlor. She was goin' to tell the Deacon he was out, it was Cap'n Becker's turn. Just that minute the door flew open and in rushed a rough-looking, unshaven man. Judith Bascom gives one look. Under that dirt and growth of whiskers she recognizes her lost husband. She gives one screech, and as Skipper Sol told me afterwards, in one holy second they were lashed together in a rollin' hitch.

The Deacon and Skipper Sol went out of the front door so close together that they jammed. When they got clear the Skipper helped the Deacon on his way with a hearty kick.

Length of Twilight

Twilight ends when the sun is 18 degrees below the horizon. At the equator, where the sun's daily path is perpendicular to the horizon, the earth turns through this zone of twilight in about one and one-fourth hours. In the latitude of the United States the average length of twilight exceeds one and one-half hours, its duration being greatest in midsummer, when it is more than two hours.

Electric Lighthouse Ready

New Zealand's first coast lighthouse to be lighted by electricity has been completed at the entrance of Wellington harbor. A strong electric plant has been installed in a reinforced concrete tower standing 40 feet high on Baring Head, 286 feet above sea level. The height gives the beam of light a range of 23 miles out to sea. Should one lamp fail, an automatic changer will bring a spare lamp into focus and light it.

Lesson for July 14

NAOMI

LESSON TEXT—Ruth 1:14-22; 4:14-17.
GOLDEN TEXT—A woman that feareth the Lord, she shall be praised.—Proverbs 31:30.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Happy Family.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Making a Happy Home.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Living Our Religion.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Making Religion Attractive.

In teaching this lesson it will be necessary to cover the entire book of Ruth.

I. Naomi's Sojourn in Moab (Ruth 1:1, 2).

On account of famine in the land of Judah, Naomi with her husband and two sons emigrated to the land of Moab. It is strangely inconsistent for a man whose name means "my God is King," who has a wife whose name is "the pleasant one," and who lives in a town which means "house of bread," to sojourn in the enemy's country on account of famine at home.

II. Naomi's Bereavement (Ruth 1:3-5).

After the death of her husband, her two sons married Moabitish women. In a short time, her sons also died. This is a dreary picture—three widows in the same home in a short time.

III. Her Return to Bethlehem (Ruth 1:3-22).

Having heard that the Lord had visited his people in Judah in giving them bread, Naomi decided to return to her home land. After she had experienced chastisement she returned.

1. Ruth accompanies her. When the time came for Naomi to go from Moab, Ruth and Orpah accompanied her for a distance. She frankly placed before them the difficulties which would confront them, and repeatedly urged them to turn back.

a. No chance to marry again. She reminded Ruth and Orpah that she had no more sons for whom they could wait.

b. Their heathen gods must be renounced (v. 15). She made it quite clear to them that idolatry could not be practiced in the land where God's people dwelt.

c. Though Orpah went back, Ruth stood the test. Her mind was fully made up. She was willing to accept as her God the One who was able to produce in his subjects the nobility of character she observed in Naomi.

2. Naomi's reception. Her arrival made a stir in Bethlehem. The people recognized her and perceived a marked change wrought in her. Ten years of such trials would make a noticeable change even outwardly, but the change was mainly inward. She asked that her name be changed to Mara.

IV. Naomi's Gracious and Tactful Behavior (Ruth 2, 3).

1. She remembered her wealthy kinsman (ch. 2). In the case of a forfeited possession, it was incumbent upon the nearest kinsman to redeem it. Boaz was a kinsman. It was necessary for both Naomi and Ruth to have food. Barley harvest afforded that opportunity. The divine provision was made for the poor when the harvest was gathered (Lev. 19:9, 10; 23:22; Deut. 21:19). The matter was talked over between Naomi and Ruth, and arrangement was made for Ruth to glean in the field of Boaz.

2. Naomi seeking rest for Ruth (ch. 3). This rest was to be in the house of a husband. Other things being equal, such is the only real place of rest for a woman. Naomi instructed Ruth as to her toilet preparations so as to be attractive and then also as to presenting her claim upon Boaz to perform the duty of a kinsman in redeeming the forfeited estate because of the sojourn in Moab. The redemption of the estate involved not only the ability to pay the price of the forfeited possession, but also the marrying of the woman.

V. Naomi's Reward (4:14-17).

1. Blessed by the women of Bethlehem (vv. 14, 15). The birth of a son to Ruth was the occasion of this blessing. It meant the perpetuation of the line of kinship, and looked forward to the true Redeemer, our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ.

2. She became the nurse for her grandson (v. 16). This not only provided her with a home and living, but with the opportunity of helping on the purpose of God in the coming redemption.

3. The baby given a name (v. 17). "Obed" means "servant of God." Ruth thus became a link in the ancestral chain of our Kinsman and Redeemer, Jesus Christ. The introduction of a Gentle into this line indicated the outreach of the redemptive purpose of God, which extends to the peoples of the whole world.

Progress

A marked characteristic of the progressive man is that he is always improving something somewhere. He has a horror of possible deterioration, and he knows the demoralizing, disintegrating power of familiarity with inferiority.—O. S. M.

Children

A child is trained much more by example than precept. Parents should therefore be most careful to act up to what they profess; and to let their actions be a reflex of their words.

Ireland Long Land of "Saints and Scholars"

There is no encyclopedic record of the exact phrasing of the tribute so long accorded Ireland, "Island of Saints and Scholars," but perhaps the following facts will be enlightening:

The introduction of Christianity into Ireland was not attended with bloodshed as in many other countries; indeed, afterward the nation seems to have enjoyed a season of repose from strife, although southern Europe was being over-run by the Germanic hordes. This repose favored the growth and expansion of Christianity and the progress of learning. The schools and monasteries founded by St. Patrick and his bishops in the Fifth century became the centers from which went forth many scholars, and even as early as the Sixth century Ireland became the seat of western learning. Its monasteries were the schools whence missionaries who disseminated the Christian faith throughout continental Europe proceeded. Diocesan organization as understood in countries under the Roman law was unknown in early Ireland. Consequently there was not that limitation of the number of bishops that territorial jurisdiction renders necessary, and the number of bishops increased beyond all proportion. St. Mochta, abbot of Louth, and reputed disciple of St. Patrick, is stated to have had no less than 100 bishops in the monastic family. These facts may give some light on the possible appellation of "Land of Saints and Scholars."

In the Eighth and Ninth centuries the scholars of Ireland were among the most distinguished at the courts of the kings, especially that of Charlemagne. But when the Northmen made their descent on the country some of the schools were destroyed and Irish monks and scholars fled to the continent, carrying with them their books. Among them were many of the greatest lights in the world of letters of the time, such as Sedulius Scottus and Johannes Scottus Erigena. The oldest Irish university is Trinity college, Dublin, founded in 1591, which by no means is the oldest university in Europe. The National University of Ireland, with three constituent colleges, Dublin, Cork and Galway, was founded in 1909.—Indianapolis News.

Pimples Completely Gone

After Using Cuticura Soap and Ointment

"My face broke out with pimples that came from surface irritation and were quite large. It itched and burned and at night would itch so badly I would scratch, and the pimples finally turned into eruptions. My face was disfigured for the time being; I looked as if I had the measles."

"Then I read about Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a free sample. I got great results so I bought more, and I used only two cakes of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment and the pimples were completely gone." (Signed) Miss Mayne Michelsen, Weeping Water, Neb.

LOWER COST PER TON MILE DUE TO FIRESTONE EXTRA CONSTRUCTION FEATURES

QUESTION No. 1—"Will the non-skid tread give me the greatest traction and protection against skidding?"

ANSWER—The patented construction feature of two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords under the tread makes it possible for Firestone to use a wider, flatter tread with higher shoulders, that puts more rubber on the road. This, combined with the scientific non-skid design, gives greatest non-skid safety and traction ever known.

QUESTION No. 2—"Is the tire body protected against destructive internal heat, the chief cause of premature tire failure?"

ANSWER—Every cord in Firestone Tires is soaked and saturated in pure, liquid rubber by the patented Gum-Dipping process. This process, not used in any other tire, soaks every cotton cord and insulates every strand, preventing internal friction and heat, giving extra strength, longer life, greater dependability.

QUESTION No. 3—"Will the tread give me long wear at today's higher speeds?"

ANSWER—A new and tougher tread compound developed by Firestone gives you longer wear at lower cost per mile, even at today's higher speeds.

ILLINOIS
BREVITIES

Mrs. Caroline Trendley Renshaw, eighty-six, member of a pioneer East St. Louis family, and aunt of John M. Trendley, handwriting expert, died of heart disease.

By a vote of 26 to 0 the senate passed a bill drastically broadening the powers of police to make arrests without warrants where knowledge of a felony is uncertain.

Harry Schroeder and Harry Scheible of Elgin were fined $50 each by County Judge Olney G. Allen of Kane county in Geneva, after pleading guilty of killing a deer in violation of the game laws.

For the third time in three years, Harry Cooper, Glen Oak Country club professional, is the Illinois state open golf champion. He won the title at Rockford Country club with a total score of 138.

Funeral services were conducted at Mathews for William Keller, fifty, who died of burns suffered when he poured kerosene on kindling to start a fire at his home. He was a cousin of Congressman Kent E. Keller of the Twenty-fifth Illinois district.

Pensions for laborers employed by municipalities of more than 200,000 population, or by the board of education in such cities, were assured when Governor Horner signed house bill 968. The measure creates a laborers' and retirement board employees' annuity and benefit fund, and a board of trustees to administer the act.

Stamp collectors and friends of conservation who are not hunters may now purchase 1934-35 duck stamps without having them affixed to hunting licenses or certificates, C. F. Thompson, director of the state department of conservation, announced. A new federal law, Mr. Thompson said, provides that the stamps may be purchased by anyone, and in unlimited quantities.

Ground was broken for Moline's new $106,000 municipal swimming pool and bathhouse located in Riverside park. The pool and bathhouse are being constructed as a PWA project, $30,000 of the entire cost being an outright grant to the city from the Public Works administration. The pool will be ready for use late in September.

Officials of Lake county investigated the apparent suicide of Lucian Cypher, thirty-two years old, a Wauconda constable, who shot himself in the head in a cottage at Round Lake. Mrs. Kathryn Geary, forty years old, told police that she and Cypher had been drinking together and he had driven her to the cottage, where she is a housekeeper, in order to obtain some clothing. She said Cypher had threatened to take his life because of domestic troubles.

Gov. Henry Horner was notified from Washington that rural rehabilitation in Illinois will be administered by the Federal Resettlement administration. This change in policy, simultaneously effective in all states, complies with a ruling by the United States comptroller-general that the federal government cannot make available to state rural rehabilitation corporations any funds appropriated under the emergency relief appropriation act of 1935, according to a telegram received by Governor Horner from Carl C. Taylor, director of the Division of Resettlement and Rural Rehabilitation.

Sangamon county officials wonder just how much their jail here qualifies to its advance billings as an "escape-proof" prison. June 9 five prisoners escaped from the jail, throwing the first shadow of doubt on the veracity of the "escape-proof" claims. Now four more prisoners have fled from the jail. The oldest of the quartet was sixteen. The four youths, all of Springfield, slipped down a ladder-work attached to the building, sped past Sheriff Luke Gaul, who stood nearby with seven of his men and three Decatur officers, and escaped into the night. They are Frank Annuci, sixteen; Joseph Valatka, fifteen; Donald Luck, fifteen, and Maurice Randall, colored, thirteen. Before they fled they slugged another youth, Wayne Hileman, seventeen, of Marion, Ind., when he refused to join them.

As the senate, by a vote of 9 to 23, rejected his plea for a two-year extension of the investigation into alleged subversive activities in the state's colleges, Senator Charles W. Baker made public his minority report on the abruptly ended inquiry. Senator Baker, in the report, renewed his demand for a full and complete investigation of communistic activities at the University of Chicago, and other universities in the state; demanded that the University of Chicago require its professors to cease allowing the name of the university to be connected with those engaged in communistic activities; and that, if communistic activities at the university do not cease, a law be passed which would take away the tax-exemption privileges from it and any other universities fostering communism.

John Esquameaux, eighty-one years old, an Indian, died of a heart attack in Zion home, at Zion, where he had lived for the last 15 years. Esquameaux was a deacon in the Christian Catholic church of Overseer Wilbur Glenn Voliva. He was born in Ontario, Can., and a daughter, Mrs. William Oliver, who lives at Whitefish Falls, Ont., is the only surviving relative.

Roy D. Peterson, twenty, of Bloomington, a CCC worker on furlough, was killed when his motorcycle collided with an automobile driven by Charles Hauck of Decatur.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

BUSTER BEAR IS STARTLED

STRAIGHT toward the little pile of leaves in the Green Forest under which Danny Meadow Mouse was hiding walked Buster Bear. His little eyes, for his eyes are little compared with his great size, were fixed right on that little pile of leaves. Danny was certain that they were fixed right on his own small gray person. Why else should Buster look straight at him and walk straight toward him?

As a matter of fact Buster didn't see him at all. Of course not. Danny was hidden under those leaves. Buster couldn't have seen him had he known Danny was there and tried to see him. And he didn't know he was there. A fat Meadow Mouse was the last person in the world Buster Bear expected to find over in that part of the Green Forest. His thoughts were not on Meadow Mouse or any other mice for that matter. They were wholly on beechnuts. He is very fond of beechnuts, is Buster Bear, and it was to look for beechnuts that he had come to that particular part of the Green Forest that particular night. You see it was the part of the Green Forest where the beech trees grow.

So Buster Bear wasn't thinking of anything but beechnuts as he walked toward that little pile of leaves and Danny Meadow Mouse. He was making a noise deep down in his throat. Danny thought he was growling and big fellow as I am. It would be a lot easier if it were not for these pesky leaves. Seems as if nuts just dearly love to hide under leaves. Wish they grew the way berries grow. It would be a lot easier to get enough if they did. Now we'll see how many I'll find under these leaves."

By this time he was near enough to reach out a great paw with its dreadful claws. Danny saw that great paw starting toward him. With a faint little squeak of fright he scurried out from under those leaves, and because he was headed towards Buster Bear and was too frightened to know where he was going he ran straight at Buster. It was all so sudden and unexpected that for an instant it startled Buster.

the sound would have frightened him still more only he was already as frightened as it was possible to be. Buster wasn't growling. He was talking to himself.

"There is a little pile of leaves I haven't raked over yet," he was saying. "There ought to be some nice sweet nuts in among those leaves. Can't think of anything better than nice sweet beechnuts. That centuries ago soap and water were looked upon as harmful and such teaching as there was on the subject strongly discountenanced washing. "La Civilté Nouvelle," a manual for the guidance of youth, published in 1667, warned children that "to wash in water injures the eyesight, brings on toothaches and colds and engenders pallor."

Frozen Boston Pudding.

Break into bits or grate a half-pound of brown bread a day old, pour over one pint of boiling hot cream and let it stand until cool. The Bat's Wings

The surface of a bat's wing is furnished with a multitude of nerve-ends of almost incredible delicacy, by which, it is believed, the animal perceives the presence of something unseen, but to be avoided, by the varying of the air caused by its flight and reflected back. This theory explains the ability of bats to live and fly about in pitch dark caves, or when experimentally blindfolded in a room containing tangled wires that remain untouched.

QUESTION BOX

by ED WYNN, The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

A young man has been annoying me for some time because I refuse to marry him. Wherever I go he follows me and asks me, time and time again, to marry him. I do not love him and have told him so. Last night he said he would never give up and would follow me to the end of the earth. Please tell me how to get rid of him?

Sincerely,
IVY POYSEN.

Answer: Let him follow you to the end of the earth and when you get him there push him off.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I met a man yesterday who says he knows another man who was married for 23 years and then shook his wife when she was forty-five years old. What do you think of that?

Truly yours,
GOODE N. KLEVER.

Answer: That's not a bad shake.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I am taking an examination to join the police force. One question puzzles me. What I want to know is this. Suppose I arrest a man and while we are waiting for the patrol wagon to come, a gust of wind comes along and blows his hat down the street, should I let him run after it?

Truly yours,
T. BISKITTS.

Answer: Of course not. Don't you see if you let the prisoner run after the hat he'll keep on running and escape? What you want to do in a case like that is to let the prisoner stand on the corner and you run after the hat.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I have been wearing glasses for about six months, and yesterday, through carelessness, I dropped my glasses and they broke. I must get a new pair. So what I want to know is will I have to be examined all over? Truly yours,

I. LIDDS.

Answer: Of course not, only your eyes.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

There is a certain man who passes our house every day and I notice no matter how hard it rains he never carries an umbrella. How do you account for that?

Truly yours,

I. C. HIMM.

Answer: That is very easily accounted for. He most likely eats a lot of salt mackerel, and that keeps him dry.

SPANISH BULLION

ONCE upon a time there were two young prospectors. They had been tramping the New Mexico mountains for some time, and as winter was drawing near they were short-cutting across the ranges toward home. They were somewhere in the rough country which comprises the southwestern corner of the state.

Late one afternoon, snow began to fall. "We'll have to hole up for the night, George," said one of the men to the other. "First likely-looking cave we come to, we'll call it a day." "Looks like one ahead, there," said the other, and they quickened their steps. The cave proved to be a fair-sized cavern, but they built a fire near its mouth to keep warmth in and wild animals out, and soon they were comfortably frying bacon and boiling coffee.

After supper, relaxed before the fire, they looked about them. At the far end of the cave a second, smaller hole appeared, some 10 feet up the rocky wall. The snow had stopped falling, and everything was peaceful.

"Well, we didn't find any hidden treasure this trip," said the man called George.

"No, and we never will. There isn't any, that's why."

"Oh, I don't know. I've heard—listen, Bill, did anyone ever tell you about the lost treasure of the Golden Giant?"

"Nope; sounds like a fairy tale. I suppose the giant ate up all the—"

"No, this Golden Giant is a mine at Pinos Altos, south of here. It has been gophered just under the surface, and from the extent of the workings I'd say that a lot of ore was taken out of that mine, one time and another. It's supposed to have been worked by the Spaniards who lived at Santa Rita. The local legend says that the Spaniards got out a fabulous fortune, whatever that means, and the next thing to do was to take it over to Santa Rita, where the fort was. So they loaded it on burros and set out.

"Santa Rita is about 25 miles south-east of Pinos Altos as the crow flies—but burros don't fly, and they had to go around. The got up above where Hurley now stands, and I suppose they were congratulating themselves that they were on the last lap, when—"

"When the Golden Giant woke up and came after them?" politely inquired Bill.

"No, you dummy! Nothing like that. It was Indians that showed up about then, good old host-ile Apaches. The priest in charge of the pack-train just had time to get them up on the mesa and hastily bury the gold. Then the Apaches got too near for comfort, and although the Spaniards put up a brave fight, they were all killed."

"I'll bet that right in these very mountains there's treasure cached away, if a person could know where to look."

"That's a big 'if,'" moralized Bill.

"What do you say we get some sleep?"

The next morning Bill, looking about him with a practiced eye for traces of ore, noticed again the small cave in the rear of their lodging. It was an ordinary-looking hole, but for some undefined reason he felt a lively interest in it.

"I'm going to look and see what's in that little cave," he told his partner, who was ready to start on.

"Now who's got funny ideas about hidden treasure?" jeered George. "Come on; no use climbing up in that hole."

"I'm going to look, anyway," replied Bill. "Here goes!"

He managed to scramble up the rocky wall, and landed safely in the darkness of the little cave. It was hard to see anything; he lit a match . . . another . . . "Hey, George!" he called, urgently.

George, who had started on, heard the summons and came back. "What do you want?" he demanded, rather crossly.

"Give me a flashlight, and hurry up!"

"What's the matter now?" He unpacked the flashlight and handed it up to Bill, whose hand trembled a little. "What have you got?"

For answer Bill threw down a dusty, heavy, small oblong that fell with a thud on the floor of the cave. George bent over to pick it up, but he straightened up again and looked at Bill as if he were seeing a ghost.

"G-gold!" he stammered, weakly, "G-gold b-bars!"

"You will talk about Golden Giants, will you?" roared Bill. "Well, here's hidden treasure for you—more than you and I can carry!" He jumped down, went over to the door of the cave and looked out. Then he turned back.

"Or am I going crazy?" he mumbled. No, he was not crazy, though the two behaved like idiots for a while in the exuberance of their emotions. Finally they calmed down long enough to plan that they would take the gold home, then return in the spring and hunt for the mine from which it came.

And here "Bill" and "George" pass into the valhalla of legendary heroes. No one knows anything further about them. And whether they ever returned and found the mine remains a secret. Not even a legend remains to explain the source of that hidden treasure.

PRETTY AS HER HEROINES—THAT'S MARTHA OSTENSO

Her Newest Story Now Appears Serially in This Newspaper.

MARTHA OSTENSO
Meeting Martha Ostensio would not be unlike meeting Silver Grenoble, the pretty blonde girl whose problems form the basis of "There's Always Another Year," Miss Ostensio's latest novel, which this newspaper now brings to you in serial form. Although she is only in her early thirties, she has already written eight successful novels, the first of which won her the Dodd, Mead first novel prize.
The author was born in Ostensio township on the Hardangerfjord in Norway, and came to America at the age of two. She learned to speak English in South Dakota, and when the family moved to Canada she began to earn money by writing it for the Manitoba Free Press. Like many reporters she succumbed to the call of New York where she did newspaper work and social service.
"Wild Geese," her first novel, was already framed in her mind, and it was not long before she got it on paper and with it won world-wide recognition. "The Dark Dawn," "The Mad Carew," "Prologue to Love" and others followed it. "There's Always Another Year" has been called a climax of her brilliant career. Read every installment as this story unfolds serially in these pages.

Unproductive Land
Pontine marshes form a part of the district known in Italy as the Campagna di Roma, which is situated between Rome and the coast. Efforts have been made to drain the district, but without much success, and at the present time the district is used almost exclusively as a grazing ground for cattle.

Cranberry Cultivation
Out of a total of 29,964 acres of cranberries in the United States, 14,000 are in Massachusetts and 18,000 in New Jersey. Cranberries are little grown outside of the United States. About 100 acres are being cultivated in Nova Scotia and they have been tried with little success in Norway, the Netherlands and Denmark.
